A NARROW ESCAPE. Mr. William A. Ruff had a Marrow escape from fatal injuries last Saturday morning. He was assisting his farming in the wagon driving, as he approached a bank which was rendered exceedingly slippery by the freezing of the falling rain, he was thrown out head foremost. His fall was somewhat broken by his striking the rump of one of the horses. One side of his heal was hurt by striking the frozen ground. The wagon ran over him the wheels passing over his head, shoulders and lags, causing severe bruises. Mr. Ruff thinks his collar bone was possibly displaced. About fifteen years ago it was broken and was not properly set. He was assisted to arise and with difficulty reached the house. All that day his suffering was quite severe, but he is better now. Mr. Ruff has been the victim of many accidents, but he says this is the most marvelous escape he has ever and finding the young lady had gone to church they lowered the lamps thinking they would have time to take a nap. When she came back and found the two men reclining in the dim light she did not sbrick, but took the family Bible from a tablenear by, and brought it down on the head of one of them with such force as to make a deeper impression on him than the Bible had ever done before. Then she stepped into the hall and held the door while she summoned her father to come and dispose of "two tramps." The young gentlemen expressed every willingness to capitulate, but their voices were husky with fright and they were unrecognize!. The old man told his daughter to open the door and he would sprinkle them with shot as they passed, which she did, but it was impostible to flush the game, and finally she ventured in to show them out so the old man would have a shot at them, wher, the light having been turned up, she recognized her two friends, who were in a duced to remain lorger.-Warrenton

The Roanoke Times says: The small boys were not on the streets last night. At 7:45 o'clock Sergeant Manual rang the fire bell, which warned them that GLOVES-Men's Sheep Skin Gloves for hard they must be at their homes at 8 o'clock. In case boys are at work and are necessarily compelled to be out after the hour prescribed by law, they should carry a permit from their parents stating where they are employed and what time they are expected to get home. Boys who are past sixteen years of age should get a certificate from their parents to that effect. The police force does not recognize general permits which allow boys under sixteen to be out a all times of night and those who are out with no specific purpose will be summoned to police court, Two boys were summoned on Saturday night, one of whom claimed he was sixteen years old, but in size he does not look it, hence the idea of giving the certificate to those who have arrived at that age. .
